

NEW YEAR GREETED BY CAPITAL CITY

Homes, Hotels, and Clubs Extend Open Hand.

POOR AIDED BY CHARITIES

Clear Skies Add to Feeling of Good Will, and Streets Are Thronged by Gay Crowds of Pleasure Seekers. Spirit of Generosity and Cheer for Fellow-men Prevalent.

It's a serious business, this matter of getting a new year started promptly, and Washington had its brows knitted in much perplexity over it yesterday.

Of course, the glad hand reached out abundantly (some 500 times at the White House alone), and the slap on the back wasn't suffering from inattention, but with all the gold braid parading about the streets and the young men and maidens making their annual rounds in taxicabs, New Year's Day is essentially a day of introspection and pious resolve.

Iconoclasts on the back fence notwithstanding, all were subject to unaccountable tricks of the mind, and many of us held our smelling salts to our noses and looked for somebody's arms to fall into as we peered into almost forgotten meadows of the memory and wondered how all the staid and sunken spots came to be.

Fresh Ideas Brought Forth.

Or stepping from the meadows into other metaphorical morasses, it was as if we had received a package marked "fragile" or "destructible" or anything else that goes with a high express rate, and had to undo it and get it set up safely on the shelf without waking the baby.

We were all, so to speak, busily engaged plucking the excelsior from a bundle of fresh ideas, or reaching down into Pandora's box with one hand for the fairy of Hope, while with the other we did our best to hold back all the little demons of unrest, discontent, and jealousy and the rest of the tribe of undesirable.

It's an awkward position to be in, but it's more or less a good thing that we are inclined to submit to it once a year by way of staying in practice.

Just as a week ago we were all saying "Merry Christmas," so yesterday the tune was "Happy New Year," and it simply goes to show that troubles aren't the only things that never come singly.

From President to pauper a happy new year was a fact to be devoutly believed, and if all the wishes were sincere the heavenly semaphores must have registered a strong desire on the part of the earth beings for an A. I. year. And perhaps we're not far wrong if we imagine the Professor of Geology up there sending a message to the President of the Divine University, saying:

"Make 1909 a good one. Rush!"

Spirit of Generosity.

Throughout the city a lavish spirit of generosity and good will prevailed. At the clubs the word was "welcome," and "open house" was kept for friends of members. Hotels, too, were not far behind, and in every department, even to the free lunch, plates were heaped extra high, and brigade after brigade of turkeys appeared, toes up, as brown as autumn berries, and steaming from the oven.

Charitable associations did noble work for the needy, and their open doors were the mecca of many a little waif who would otherwise have fared poorly, and for many a father and mother, whose own hunger was for their children's hearts.

HOTELS WERE QUIET.

But They Will Fill Up Rapidly the Coming Week.

There was comparative quiet at the hotels last night after the noisy and joyful celebrations of the night before, but the new year was ushered in with music, songs, flowers, banqueting, and happy wishes for a happy year to come.

There is not much business at the hotels this week, so far as new arrivals are concerned, but an influx of new arrivals and a brisk business is expected with the beginning of the coming week, to last for the balance of the season.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Various Patriotic Organizations Call on the President.

Before the reception to citizens yesterday at the White House the patriotic societies were received. The Society of the Cincinnati, headed by Assistant Secretary George J. Davies and Gen. Following were the Army and Navy Union, the Minute Men, and the Sons of the Revolution. Following the patriotic organizations the Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia was greeted.

On the way to the White House the 150 members were photographed on the south steps of the Treasury building. Andrew W. Kelly was marshal and President Theodore W. Noyes led the line to the Blue Room.
